The Freedom That Is Basic
In the name of free speech and freedom of the press - the First Amendment provisions - a lot of Communist trouble-makers and their stooges cavort in public places; saying and doing things that are at least on the borderline of the seditious, always with the declaration that such is their "constitutional right."

It is significant, however, that it is not their admired Marxist lands in which such freedom is known; but the democracies. Everywhere a Marxist moves in, the movement clamps down violent closures on freedom. By way of illustration, note a quotation: "Why should freedom of speech and freedom of the press be allowed? Why should a government which is doing what it believes to be right allow itself to be criticized? It would not allow opposition by lethal weapons. Ideas are much more fatal things than guns. Why should any man be allowed to buy a printing press and disseminate pernicious opinion calculated to embarrass the government?"

Whose words are these? Nikolai Lenin said it - the Marxist hand that led to the violence that established communism as the way of life in Russia. Characteristically, communism puts out the light wherever it takes over. Stooges in this country who invoke the First Amendment are wrapping themselves for protection in the very instrument they would totally destroy should their ideology come to power. - Nashville (Tenn.) For An Era, 'No Survivors'
Newsmen everywhere will feel a twinge of nostalgia over the death of the last Bonfils.

The unusual name, pronounced Bone-feece, is legendary from the era of rip-roaring journalism. The Denver Post was the setting, starting in 1886. That is the year the newspaper was bought by Frederick G. Bonfils, showman extraordinaire, and his partner, H. H. Tammen, self-styled rascal.

Their deeds of derring-do and delirium were immortalized by the late Gene Fowler in his book, "Timberline." They and their flamboyance are virtually the antithesis of present-day respectability among newspapermen. They amassed a fortune, and it wound up in the hands of Miss Helen G. Bonfils, twice married, once widowed, once divorced, a patron of the theater and "angel" to Broadway.

She died Tuesday in Denver. The New York Times ended its account of her life matter-of-factly: "She leaves no immediate survivors." - Miami (Fla.) Herald

The System Works For Miss Davis

We held no preconceived notion as to the guilt or innocence of Angela Davis, so we are willing to accept the verdict of the jury that she was innocent of participation in the kidnapping of hostages and the murder of a judge in California.

Miss Davis was tried before an all-white jury, a fact that is significant only because many blacks contend that black defendants cannot get a fair shake in court from whites. The outcome of the trial shows that the system which is under so much attack from discontented people can be made to work for the benefit of those like Miss Davis who are outside the system...

We need a reminder now and then that every accused is presumed innocent until found guilty. In Angela Davis' case, despite strenuous efforts by the prosecution, guilt was not proved. - Gainesville (Ga.) Daily Times

Booming business

DALLAS (AP) — Business is almost too good, George Voneiff, 11, will tell you.

He knows what he's talking about, too, despite his lack of years. For almost a year he has been a quite successful business man.

George, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Voneiff of Dallas, said Wednesday, "My mother and I have always had a big interest in plants. Ours seem to grow real well. When a woman in my mother's office said she couldn't get anything to grow, we joked and said we'd rent her one of ours."

At that point the woman took them up on the offer, and George was launched in the rent-a-plant business. He charged 50 cents a month and found other customers easily interested and satisfied.

"At the end of the month we would either pick a plant up, leave it or bring another plant," related George.

"Our business called DGEM. That stands for Daddy, George, Elizabeth (his sister, 9) and Mother. When DGEM had collected about $50, I decided to open a savings account."

He took his money to a savings and loan association and told how it was earned. George left the place with an order for four rent-a-plants.

"Most of the money goes back into equipment for our greenhouse," Mrs. Voneiff said. "But George is learning something more important: He's learning how to run his own business."

"He even keeps his own books and goes around to the various nurseries in town and talks to the nurserymen about different problems that arise."

George sells some plants and several florists are among the buyers.

Pictorial editorial.

A trash can and debris litter this alley just off U. S. Highway 67 in Hope. The scene is not that unusual, but the location makes it worthy of note: The alley is located adjacent to the Chamber of Commerce office. Other alleys in town, however, are as bad or worse, including the alley adjacent to the Hope Star.

Swabbie girl:

A girl behind every porthole

NORFOLK, Va. (AP) — Many old Navy salts would prefer a girl in every port to one behind every porthole.

"It's unreal," moaned Chief Stan Plank as he nursed a drink Wednesday afternoon at the stag bar in a service club at the Naval Station.

Plank wasn't alone in his disbelief at the Navy's latest directive, one that will allow women to serve aboard combat vessels. Many of Plank's fellow Navy chiefs — the senior enlisted personnel in the service — echoed his misgivings about the order handed down Tuesday by the Chief of Naval Operations, Adm. Elmo Zumwalt.

Their doubts about the program also were shared by many Navy wives who now have to wrestle with the thought of their husbands going out to sea for a half a year or more with women.

"You put men and women on a ship together for six months and you're going to have troubles," said Frances Doval, whose husband is a steward aboard the carrier Independence.

Turning to a second-class petty officer at the door of the Navy exchange, she pointed a finger in his face and laughed.

"Now, in six months, you know you're going to find a way."

"It's no place for a woman," claimed Mary Mountford. "If they want that they ought to get them out on the battlefield."

"I think the woman's place is in the home with the children," added the mother of four whose husband is attached to a port services unit at the Naval Station.

To be sure, not all hands were knocking Zumwalt's directive. "Great, bring them on in," said a chuckling Chief C.W. Thomas of Washington.

"On a sub, we'd love it," said Petty Officer 2.C. John Pedroni, a torpedoman serving aboard the attack nuclear submarine Ray. But Pedroni added with a sigh that there was "no way" he could foresee women aboard the boats.

"We're out 70 to 80 days and they couldn't handle it," he said.

Some Navy wives have mixed feelings about the program. "I believe they can do it," said Nancy Lawless, whose husband is a first class machinist's mate aboard the guided missile destroyer Leahy. She paused and added: "Now, I don't know about seasickness. Women are kind of delicate, you know."

The prospects of friction among the crew members seemed to bother most chiefs.

Some chiefs expressed regret that the change was coming, but especially that it was coming before they would have a chance to go down to sea with sailors in slips.

"I'm going to be retired the first of September," said Chief Roy O'Quinn of Norfolk. "This should have been done 25 years ago."

Romney to quit post in Nixon administration

By JAY PERKINS

WASHINGTON (AP) — George Romney says he's quitting as secretary of housing and urban development as soon as he cleans up some last-minute assignments from President Nixon.

Of Nixon's 12 original Cabinet appointees, eight have already quit, although some have taken other roles in the administration.

With Romney's departure, only Secretary of State William P. Rogers, Defense Secretary Melvin Laird and Transportation Secretary John A. Volpe will remain of the original Nixon Cabinet.

He decided to leave the government several months ago, Romney said Friday, but Nixon asked him to stay on.

Romney, a former Michigan governor and auto company executive, met with Nixon to discuss HUD's efforts to find housing for flood victims in Pennsylvania. He told a news conference later he also brought up his desire to leave the Cabinet.

"I discussed with the President months ago my desire to devote myself in the years just ahead in a private capacity rather than a public capacity," he said. "The President asked me to stay on and deal with the problems of housing and the cities. I have done so."

"He has asked me to help secure the federal leadership required to mount an effective effort in Luzerne County, Pa. I have agreed to do that."

Romney said he recommended that Nixon appoint a federal disaster director to supervise relief efforts in Luzerne County and other areas hard-hit by Tropical Storm Agnes this year. He said Nixon agreed to do so and asked him to help

Romney gave no indication of when he planned to leave the administration or what type of job he is considering. He said only that the job under consideration is a public-service role in the private sector.

Romney indicated he and Nixon had had some policy differences but said he felt his personal relationship with the President had not deteriorated. He said he planned to campaign for Nixon's re-election.

The HUD secretary also said Nixon was not unhappy about statements Romney made in a verbal exchange with Pennsylvania Gov. Milton Shapp earlier this week. The two men clashed over how much aid the federal government should provide to Pennsylvania flood victims and Romney accused Shapp, a Democrat, of using the disaster for political purposes.

'Untouchables' begin manhunt

BELFAST (AP) — A squad of 100 hand-picked detectives known as the "Ulster Untouchables" has begun a manhunt for teams of assassins who have slaughtered more than 40 men and women in Belfast since the beginning of July.

The detectives are operating in both Protestant and Roman Catholic areas of the Northern Ireland capital. They moved into the former rival strongholds in the wake of the tough British military action last week that rolled aside barricades and routed the guerrillas.

The enclaves were the hideouts from which the assassination gangs struck at night, killing or kidnapping their victims. But police believe the killers are not connected with the Irish Republican Army or the Protestant's Ulster Defense Association.

Authorities say there are at least two Protestant gangs and one Catholic "revenge" squad behind the wave of killings.

One of the Protestant extermination squads is believed to be the Ulster Volunteer force, an old-guard vigilante group outlawed several years ago and held responsible for murders of Catholics.

Another Protestant gang apparently operates out of the Old Park district of North Belfast where the bodies of several murdered Catholics have been found. No details were available on the Catholic gang.

The killers have murdered 22 Catholics and 19 Protestants in the past six weeks, further inflaming the hatred between Protestant and Catholic extremists that has plagued Ulster for 50 years.

Many more victims may lie in unmarked graves around this bomb-scarred city.

The killings began a year ago, reaching their peak in July when 38 persons were slain in what has become a macabre eye-for-an-eye vendetta between the rival assassins.

FOOTPRINTS

By GEORGE SMITH

It's about this time of year that I catch the pungent fragrance of green tomatoes floating in the breeze.

Having been reared in the small whistle-stop town of Avery, Tex. — The Tomato Center of Northeast Texas — the chipped sign outside of town said — I developed a taste for green tomatoes at an early age.

In the 50s, Avery was a sun-baked town with a perpetual population of 334. The population figure on the city limits sign was never changed; the town council figured that the number of births and deaths were about equal. (Or, as some people said, everytime a baby was born, somebody left town.)

During tomato season, the mood of Avery changed drastically. One day it was the typical sleepy burg, with a blue tick sprawled in the center of the main thoroughfare and a passel of men sitting, spitting and whittling in front of the drug store, and a gang of rag-tailed kids laughing, shoving and pitching coppers at a crack in the grass-infested sidewalk.

Then the tomato sheds would open for business. Truckloads of migrant workers magically appeared and vied with local talent for the right to strip the fields of the green gold, while farmers haggled prices with the owners of the sheds.

A mile-long string of slat-sided pickups, overflowing with shiny, fresh-picked tomatoes lined the main street on the approach to the sheds. One by one, the trucks would move toward the destination when their load was examined, priced, unloaded by brawny-armed men and dumped in the cleaner-culler.

A mechanized object d'art, the cleaner-culler was the center of attention during the tomato season. With its whirrrr-r-r-r, clu-u-u-nk, ru-u-u-m-ble and kerplunk, that machine was the heart of Avery's tomato industry.

The tomatoes were dumped in a trough at the entrance to the cleaner-culler, then carried on slick rollers through a water-spray and a buffer, before traveling up a conveyor belt where they passed under the scrutinizing eyes of the high echelon of the industry — the cullers.

With the blink of an eye, a culler would spot a bad place on a tomato, pick it out of the hundreds of rolling, tumbling tomatoes and drop it in the cull basket.

The tomatoes that passed inspection were then sized and crated automatically.

During my adolescent years, I was neither strong enough nor did have sufficient pull to work on the tomato sheds, therefore I worked for the low-life of the entire industry — the cull-buyer. The cull-buyer bought all tomatoes not fit for crating, and reputedly sold them to poor folks at exorbitant prices. But the pay was good (50 cents an hour!) and the job lasted as long as there were tomatoes in the fields.

And so it is this time of year that I start thinking of those long summer days and of the green tomato fights, the rumble-roar of the cleaner-culler and the green tomato pie, fried green tomatoes green tomato preserves that townspeople would make.

I can taste 'em now...

100,000 expected to visit War Eagle Fair

WAR EAGLE, Ark. — War Eagle Mills, Ark., population 24, is again expected to attract upwards of 100,000 visitors to its nationally known Ozarks Arts and Crafts Fair, scheduled for Oct. 20-21-22.

The tiny hamlet has become one of the most popular arts and crafts communities in the nation because of the authenticity and high quality of its exhibits, which reflect the culture of pioneers who helped establish War Eagle and other Ozark Mountain communities.

Interest in this year's 19th annual fair is at an all-time pitch, as exhibitors have already reserved some 400 booths which will be housed in two large circus-type tents and the main display building. "A few more spaces will be added for the convenience of the exhibitors," remarked executive fair director Mrs. Blanche H. Elliott.

This year's fair attendance is expected to surpass last year's record crowds which numbered between 75,000-100,000 people. "The fair continues to grow impressively," commented Mrs. Elliott.

Exhibitors from Arkansas, Oklahoma, Missouri and Kansas will display and offer for sale their authentic wares which will include such handcrafted items as quilts, rugs, wall hangings, sunbonnets and aprons, knitted pieces, macrame, delicately hand-painted china, tooled leather, silver smithed jewelry and metal sculpture, choice tole painted pieces of quilting, dolls and toy making. Also offered will be finely finished furniture from the maple, wild cherry, walnut and aged pine.

Beautiful handcrafted dulcimers, Ozark books and candles, jams and jellies from the wild fruit of the hills and the black walnut and scale-bark hickory nut meats will add flavor and goodness to this prolific arts and crafts offering.

"To perpetuate the memories of War Eagle and its charms, actual enlarged colored photographs in unique mountings will be a brand new addition, as well as a compiled book of photographic essays of life at War Eagle," Mrs. Elliott remarked.

The three-day event, conceived and established by Ozarks people whose forefathers came to the Arkansas Ozarks before statehood, is authentic and staged without fanfare or make believe. "It strives to seek out and give recognition to the unsung, unheralded, but talented individual who works with hand and heart in creating beauty from native materials surrounding him," Mrs. Elliott explained. "Our show provides the most exciting market for handcrafted goods in the Ozarks."

The fair will open each day at 9 a.m. and close at 5 p.m., with plenty of food available for anyone desiring to eat lunch on the grounds.

War Eagle Mills is located in a rustic, pastoral valley between Highways 12 and 68 near the Northwest Arkansas towns of Fayetteville, Springdale, Rogers and Huntsville. The route is marked by road signs.

LET'S BE POSITIVE on America

As we approach the 200th Anniversary of the founding of our great nation, it's time to take a good look at what has made America great.

Some people seem anxious to tell us what is WRONG with our country. Let's be positive, and think and talk about what is RIGHT about America.

Let us be reminded of the American Dream, both as seen by the immigrant and the native son, and the reality of that Dream. Let us be proud of our physical aspects of the land itself . . . of the varied peoples from many lands who have made our country what it is today.

Maybe this could be called a "plea for unity", a time to be positive in our thinking, and especially a time to BE PROUD OF AMERICA!

By Oswald & James Jacoby
In his long, distinguished bridge career John Gerber of Houston (inventor of the Gerber convention) has been known as one of the great card players of all time.

In today's hand, taken from the World's championship mixed, we see him at his best in salvaging a six-club contract. Most other pairs arrived at the easy six-hearts after North made a negative double of the two-spade overcall but Johnny does not believe in negative doubles and his partner could find no better bid than three clubs.

Johnny won the spade lead and ran off three rounds of trumps, stopping in dummy. He noted East's discard of a spade.

There was no way to avoid a heart loser; he had to avoid losing a diamond trick. Should West hold the singleton eight-spot, he could lead the 10 from dummy and pick the eight. A better chance would be to find West with either the singleton queen or jack or possibly the double queen-jack. Johnny decided to investigate the diamonds and did so by playing three rounds of hearts.

West won the third heart and Johnny had a pretty good count on his hand. He looked like a man with 6-3-3-1 distribution. Johnny played his ace of diamonds and dropped West's jack. After that it was a simple matter to go to dummy with the nine of hearts and finesse against East's queen.

THE GENERATION RAP

—by Helen and Sue Bittel

Whither, School Spirit?

Helen And Sue:
"Former Prom Queen" asked where school spirit went? Sue implied it went thataway: kids are trying so hard to break away from tradition that it's 'in' to consider school spirit 'out,' so a lot of them end up bored.

How about substituting "disillusioned" for "bored," Sue?

As past members of our school's delegate assembly, we have seen the majority of students' wants and needs tossed aside to make room for such trivia as painting garbage cans, buying lunch trays in school colors, putting unneeded signs on doors, etc. We personally proposed many changes that have never been considered.

Last spring a bunch of us planned a festival to raise money for the poor. These were the students who cared more about their community than dreaming about the class prom and how to decorate for it. Our school officials wouldn't even lend us much needed supplies. And we didn't see many student officers at the festival.

Don't accuse us of not being interested. Maybe it's just that we've outgrown all that silly kid stuff. —ANN AND CINDY DEAR Ann And Cindy:

I figured I'd get hit for saying students use dislike of the "rah-rah" as an excuse for not getting involved. And I did! It's true about some (according to our adult readers, it always has been), but when I said "a lot," I didn't mean ALL! Many kids are into community activities, everything from ecology to politics, and they're doing great jobs. They're trying to change things at their schools, too. But I still say "a lot" stay on the sidelines, and often their excuses really mean, "It's just too much bother." —SUE

Rap:
Maybe the "spirit" about proms has gone because they're too expensive. Our junior-senior prom cost a minimum of $22.50 (not including clothes), and then they made us pay extra for all our soft drinks. We got undercooked or partly frozen meat for dinner.

And we couldn't even throw confetti or make too much noise at our homecoming football game!
Somehow I no longer feel the excitement and anticipation I felt on entering high school. Instead, I feel cheated. Seems like the teachers act like students and the principal tries to be so "hep" that we can't relate to him. If other schools are like ours it's no wonder spirit is dying. —SOON TO BE SENIOR

Political Candidates

The Star has been authorized to announce the following are candidates for public office subject to action of the General Election, Nov. 7, 1972:

For Representative
LARRY S. PATTERSON
MRS. JERRI PRUDEN

WASHINGTON (AP) — Highway safety requirements demand licensing of drivers according to the level of their ability. Franklin M. Kreml, president of the Automobile Manufacturers Association, told a Transpo '72 conference recently.
In addressing the International Vehicle and Highway Safety Conference, Kreml advocated the issuing of licenses for limited purposes such as "Daylight Driving Only," "Automatic Transmission Vehicles Only" or "Non-Freeway Driving." Another recommendation was that of offering classes of licenses such as "Elementary," "Intermediate" and "Master."

The Finley phenomenon

A's have only one boss: Charlie O.

By MURRAY OLDERMAN

CHICAGO — (NEA) — Charlie Finley doesn't claim to be the smartest guy in the world. He'll tell you that right out. Average intelligence, yes. But, says Charlie, no one's going to out-hustle him.

So that's why it's no more than he expected—that he, Charles Oscar Finley Jr., has possibly the best team in all of baseball.

"Not possibly," corrects Charlie when you mention this. "THE best—you got to think positive on these things."

Charlie has owned the Oakland Athletics, who were previously the Kansas City Athletics and before that the Philadelphia Athletics, for 13 years. For the first nine years of Finley's ownership, the Athletics were hopeless losers, never rising above sixth place. That has all been turned around since the club was moved to Oakland in 1968. The current Athletics are on the way to their second Western Division championship in the American League. They are the brightest, most aggressive young team around.

And Charlie Finley is suddenly respected as a baseball sage.

Yes, the same Charlie O. who named a mule after himself to be the team mascot and then drove the mule right into the lobby of the Americana Hotel in New York. "Not only that," says Charlie, "but the mule slept the night in the bridal suite."

Of course, they spread canvas all over the floors first.

"The mule," explains Charlie O. (the man) seriously, "played an important part in the development of America. I love animals. I love baseball."

Charlie actually believes in those homilies. He lives by them.

From Interstate 80, east of Chicago, you can see the crest of the A's, with a baseball and bat, painted atop a barn. This is the hub of Finley's 1200-acre farm in LaPorte, Ind. Here he makes his decisions—for the Athletics, the California Seals of the National Hockey League and the recently acquired Memphis Tams of the American Basketball Association—when he's not in his Chicago insurance office, or in a hotel room any place.

It's the most curiously run empire in the history of sports. Charlie is a one-man operation.

"They say," muses Charlie, "How do you run a baseball team in Oakland from a farm in Indiana? I do pretty damned good by phone from a farm 2,000 miles away. I played baseball until I was 29 years old, semi-pro in the Michigan-Indiana League. I don't say I know everything, but I do know the game of baseball. It doesn't take any genius. Only hard work."

CHARLIE O. FINLEY runs the Oakland Athletics via telephone from his farm in LaPorte, Ind.

And a disregard of time zone differences, which means waking his manager up at 6 o'clock in the morning.

So now here he is in this hotel room, this man worth millions, and he's on the phone with Frank Lane in Milwaukee, trying to trade an obscure outfielder named Ollie Brown for an obscure outfielder named Joe LaHoud.

"Now," argues Charlie, "the guy's no longer bothered with tapeworm." (He doesn't get LaHoud but later waives Brown to the Brewers anyhow.)

No detail, down to the requisition of paper clips, escapes Charlie.

"I have very few people in my organizations," he says. "I don't believe it's necessary to have many. I wear three, four, five hats myself. I hire a man to do a job, he's going to wear two, three or four hats."

He's an acerbic, tough, profane man. He can also be charming and gracious and persuasive. He is hard to work for. He is impatient.

"It's not difficult for people to work for me at all," Charlie shakes his head. "It's difficult for me to put up with some of them. You want my side of the picture. Managers in baseball or coaches in football, good ones are hard to find."

"I've been condemned for changing managers so often. You look around—check Cleveland out, and other clubs—you'll find they've had just as many managers as I've had. I'm not leading the pack in my 12 years."

Yes, you are, Charlie. You've had 12 managers in 12 years. The Indians, next on the totem pole, have had 10.

"I know how I want my baseball team run," shrugs Charlie. "There's got to be communication. I think I have one of the most outstanding managers in the game today in Dick Williams. He knows how to communicate."

"You know, if you're working for someone, you've got a boss. You've got to find a way to communicate with him or you're gone."

SWANSON SWITCHES
CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP)

— North Carolina basketball coach Dean Smith says Craig Swanson of Merrick, N.Y., has left school and will enroll at C.W. Post College, Greenvale, N.Y., in the fall.

Swanson, who is 6-foot-6, starred for the Tar Babies last season, averaging 5.6 points a game as a freshman. "He expressed a desire to return to school in the north," said Smith. Swanson is the first basketball player to leave NC in seven years.

No longer. Hitters will now attest that Ryan is his full 6-2, and looming larger.
